I have worked with Simon Treloar since 1993. He is an outstanding software developer with a rare ability to understand how a business works and build software that makes it work better.

We are a law firm. Accuracy, financial control and reliable records matter to us. A system must do more than look attractive. The numbers must reconcile, the documents must match the transactions, and the records must explain what happened. Simon understands those demands.

Our relationship began with software for Brett Davies Lawyers, including legal practice management, back-office systems, trust accounting and Computer Assisted Document Assembly. Simon brought practical business understanding to the technical work. He understood the connection between the information we collected, the documents we prepared and the financial records supporting our practice.

That experience is reflected in PennyBrass. It brings bookings, payments, trust accounting, owner settlements, bank reconciliation and supporting evidence into one controlled workflow. For a business managing other people's assets and money, that is a powerful proposition. It reduces reliance on separate spreadsheets and people remembering what to do next.

Simon's strength is his understanding of the machinery beneath a business: how money moves, how records connect and how to preserve the evidence. He brings decades of experience to problems that deserve more than a superficial software solution.

I recommend Simon and Bionic Software with confidence. If you are considering PennyBrass, speak with him and arrange a demonstration. You will be dealing with someone who understands both the software and the business it needs to serve.
